Opinion

THE Diamond Jubilee weekend proved two things: Firstly, most people still regard the Royal Family, and the Queen in particular, with considerable affection and, secondly, they don't let a bit of rain spoil their fun.

It would be hard to imagine worse weather for street parties than that which arrived - particularly on the Sunday. But street parties had been arranged - and, for the most part, they went ahead. Most organisers had prepared for the worst and arranged suitable shelter in the shape of marquees or gazeboes. Mums, Dads, Grandmas and Granddads produced food and entertainment and, perhaps more importantly, got to know their neighbours better.

Time and time again we have been told of people talking to neighbours they had known by sight for years but never spoken to.

A few events were badly hit by the weather. Some were forced to move indoors. A tiny minority were cancelled.

But we rather liked the style of the folk at Appleton Thorn, who although soaked to the skin, enjoyed themselves so much they are planning another party to celebrate the Coronation next year.

WE can only assume that Cheshire East Council is, legally, within its rights to spend more than £78,000 on various surveys in connection with the controversial plan for an adventure playground within Tatton Park.

If it isn't, heads should roll among the senior officers who advise the authority.

But let's forget the legalities of the issue for a moment and concentrate instead on perceptions.

Should an authority which is to determine a planning application be putting up money for work which will assist the applicant's case?

It is not unusual for developers to be granted planning consent for projects subject to them funding necessary infrastructure works, such as access roads or measures to address noise, smells, pollution, etc.

But here we have a planning authority funding surveys and appraisals before even considering the application.

At the very least it gives the impression that the planners have already made up their minds.

THE A556 Lobby Group - made up of residents from the High Legh, Millington and Mere areas, has come up with an alternative to the controversial £174 million Highways Agency plan for a link road between the M56 and the M6 in Cheshire.

It would cost less, take up less land, would be less intrusive and would be acceptable to hundreds of people strongly opposed to the Highways Agency scheme.

What's more, it is not a plan scribbled on the back of an envelope by residents. It has been produced by professional traffic consultants.

Importantly, it would also find favour with motorists.

It seems to us to offer a great solution to a problem that has existed for 50 years.

But we fear it may have one, fatal flaw. The Highways Agency didn't think of it first.

Lucas blows up a storm

A 10-year-old Cheshire boy has been awarded an Awards for Young Musicians bursary to assist him with his musical studies.

Lucas Boylan, from Walton, is a budding tuba player already attending the prestigious Junior Royal Northern College of Music for lessons with world-renowned tuba player Les Neish.

The youngster, who is a pupil at Broomfields Junior School, Appleton, plays for the multi-award winning Lions Youth Brass and has been selected for the National Children's Brass Band of Great Britain and the National Children's Orchestra.

To cap matters, he will soon hit the big screen in the Manchester United feature movie "Theatre of Dreams" playing the tuba in a brass band.

Lucas is one of 123 outstanding young musicians to win a bursary from Awards for Young Musicians (AYM).

The charity's annual awards programme gives grants of up to £2,000 to exceptionally talented young musicians, aged 5-17.

The funding can be used to support music making in any genre, helping with costs such as buying an instrument, music lessons, course fees and travel.

AYM director Hester Cockcroft said: "Once more we've had a very high number of applications for support from young musicians from across the UK, so Lucas should be very proud of his achievement in gaining an award."

"Music is what defines these young people: it's central to their life. We're here to help them progress on their musical journey and give them the best possible chance of fulfilling their potential."

Jubilee celebrations will live long in the memory

THE Diamond Jubilee celebrations across Cheshire will live in many people's memories as an occasion when people threw off worries about the recession and decided to have a good time - whatever the weather.

And for those who chose the actual Jubilee weekend for their revels, the weather was a major consideration.

At Stockton Heath, there was a special ceremony to rename the Mill Lane Field, with Joyce Woods, a former reception teacher at Stockton Heath Primary School cutting the ribbon. Many of the events moved inside the nearby scout headquarters to escape the rain.

The field - now a Queen Elizabeth II Community Field and known as Mill Lane Diamond Jubilee Field - will be a recreation field in perpetuity.

A shop window competition in Stockton Heath was won by Living Colour on Walton Road, closely followed by Donna Marie, London Road and Broadbents of the Forge Precinct.

The judges - parish councillors from Stockton Heath, Appleton and Walton - commented on the high standard of all the window displays in the competition.

Appleton's beacon, at High Warren Reservoir, burned brightly and was followed by a firework display that could be seen over a wide area.

There was also a beacon on the roof of Lymm Water Tower.

There were numerous other special Jubilee events and projects.

The newly refurbished war memorial at Appleton Thorn was rededicated by the Rev Elaine Chegwin Hall, vicar of Stretton and Appleton, and a new memorial in memory of former parish councillor Mike Stansfield, in recognition of more than 30 years' service, was unveiled.

Appleton Independent Methodist Church staged a "Last night of the Proms" at Appleton Parish Hall.

Six schools in the Appleton and Stockton Heath area linked up in an innovative project to mark the occasion, with a wood carving at each school depicting a decade of the Queen's reign.

Not all the carvings could be completed in time for the Jubilee, but they will be in place later this year.

Numerous street parties were held in towns and villages across the county and most schools staged special events.

There was a giant street party, attended by more than 100 people in Glebelands Road, Knutsford while at Parklands Close, Appleton Thorn, residents enjoyed their party in the rain so much they are planning another next year to mark the 60th anniversary of the Coronation!

Bexton Primary at Knutsford planted a special tree to mark the occasion, and a band played on the roof at the Falcon Bearer pub at Longridge, Knutsford.

Mobberley Cricket Club staged a Jubilee beer festival - and rain didn't stop play - while the village's popular Victory Hall sensibly put on an "indoor" street party as well as a "Mobberley's Got Talent" show.

Meanwhile the annual Rose Queen Festival at Thelwall had a real Royal flavour as villagers paraded through the area displaying red, white and blue.

Larissa Melia (pictured right) aged 12, a pupil at Lymm High School was crowned Thelwall Rose Queen 2012. Retiring Queen was Claire Berry.

Many of the floats celebrated the Queen's Diamond Jubilee.

Hundreds of people turned out to cheer on the procession as it made its way to the Thelwall Parish Hall fields for the crowning ceremony.

Bawming the Thorn beats the showers

HEAVY showers and blustery wind failed to dampen the spirits of villagers at Appleton Thorn who turned out in force to celebrate the annual Bawming the Thorn ceremony which dates back to medieval times.

Pupils from Appleton Thorn Primary School performed the special "bawming the thorn" ceremony following a parade through the village involving local community groups.

The tradition dates back to time of the crusades when history says a knight brought a thorn from the crown of Jesus and planted it at Appleton Thorn.

The village is the only one in the country to celebrate "bawming the thorn" when local school children dance around the special tree which is dressed with ribbons.

Bridgewater High School pupil Heather Barker, aged 15 braved the elements to entertain the watching crowds with her rendition of the bawming song.

Special guests at the event, co-ordinated by local business woman Nora Carlin from Arley's Angels, included local historian Mark Oly.

After parading through the village and the bawming dance, a community event took place on the fields behind Appleton Thorn village hall.

Lydia's prize-winning Olympic banner

A SIX-year-old girl took first prize in the Knutsford Local Area Partnership "Embrace the Games" Olympic banner competition.

Lydia Keeley, a pupil at High Legh Primary School, drew the Olympic mascots, Wenlock and Mandeville, taking part in a range of sports which spelled out the word "Knutsford."

There were more than 150 entries received for the competition. Lydia submitted her entry back in March, never thinking she would win. But she was thrilled when her design was chosen.

She won a front row view of the Olympic Torch passing through Knutsford alongside the Town Mayor and was also awarded an engraved glass trophy, gold medal, her framed picture, a certificate and gift voucher at a special event at Knutsford Leisure Centre.

At the "Embrace the Games" event Lydia also had the privilege of holding one of the Olympic Torches, owned by Kane Gunter and is now really excited about going to watch one of the athletics sessions at the London Olympics in August.

WINE COLUMN

by Ruth Yates from

Chill Out with Summer Red's

It's a fact, when the warmer weather hits us (which doesn't seem to be very frequently at the moment) sales of white and rose wines increase and the reds decline. Is it that we just favour something lighter and cooler to drink?

So, why can't reds be as refreshing as whites? Well it can if you choose the right grape variety or wine. Therefore, here are just a few of my favourite deckchair reds that can be slightly chilled and have a refreshing palate to keep you cool during the summer.

First on my list has to be Pinot Noir, it's a very light grape and has a lovely perfumed floral & strawberry character. A difficult grape to grow that likes a cooler climate; therefore, the Casablanca Valley Explorer Pinot Noir from Chile is perfect and represents excellent value.

On to the 'Old World' and the famous Italian Valpolicella..... I know this wine can be so variable but good producers show how this wine should really taste and they don't come much better than Allegrini, he is respected all over Italy for his quality and individuality and his Valpolicella wine is a perfect example.

How about the traditional Beaujolais! Fleurie tends to be the most popular of the 10 Cru wines and is made from the fruity Gamay grape. It's perfect for summer drinking with its flowery character, elegant and full of strawberry fruit. Why not try our Chateau de Fleurie, I can assure you, you won't be disappointed.

All of these wines can be lightly chilled and are perfect for accompanying grilled fish, barbecued halloumi cheese, char-grilled or roasted vegetables, pork steaks, chicken and pasta.

Here is hoping for a better July than June!

Village festival's fifth birthday

THE annual Stockton Heath Festival marks its 5th birthday this year - and the celebrations span four action packed days from Thursday to Sunday, July 12-15.

Before that, however, strange figures will start to appear around the village as the popular scarecrow competition gets under way.

Activities are centred on the main site at Mill Lane where an arts and crafts market will be held on the Saturday with a farmers market on the following day. Alongside these will be a host of family activities with a performance of the Wizard of Oz and Presto Puppets presenting Rumpelstiltskin.

Other entertainment will include sports, stunt bikes and competitions. In the evenings there are more shows and events, including a light classical concert in St Thomas' Church, the big band sound of Dr Jazz and the Cheshire Cats, retro quintet the Swing Commanders and, new for this year, a showcase of local talent. The Abba Revival is guaranteed to finish things on a high note. The popular open air cinema will be showing "The Lion King" and there will be live drama with outdoor theatre company Oddsocks performing Shakespeare's Julius Caesar and Stockton Heath Methodist Dramatic Society celebrating significant anniversaries of 2012.

An art exhibition will showcase the work of local artists and other attractions include poetry reading, a comedy night, fun wine tasting, vintage tea party, a dog show, etc.

Festival founder and co-ordinating director Tudor Pole said: "Last year we had over 12,000 visitors coming to some 35 events. It is a true community achievement bringing together residents and local businesses who help us in so many ways. Local charities also benefit. We are all very excited about this years Festival and hope everyone enjoys it."

Full details are available at the website www.stocktonheathfestival.co.uk and a box office is open from 10am to 4pm every Friday and Saturday at the Forge Shopping Centre.

Contracts of employment

It seems that these are the least read documents in the whole time that someone works for you and actually that's how it should be. If you have a reasonable relationship with your employees then neither of you should feel the need to refer to these documents.

Unfortunately the result of this is that the drafting of these contracts gets ignored. So when there is a problem and your employee looks for a copy of theirs, the contract rarely matches the needs of your business and may not even comply with the law.

A couple of contracts I reviewed recently were clearly either downloaded from a website or were written to match the opinions of the HR consultant or solicitor who wrote them rather than the needs of the business. One had a three stage appeal process in the disciplinary procedure and was probably written by someone who had a gripe against a previous employer, as it said that until the appeal process was completed no action could be taken against an employee. This meant that it would take two months to dismiss someone who was stealing from you! The other contract committed the employer to paying for counselling for any employee who was suffering from stress even if it was not work related. In both these cases the employer had fewer than 10 staff.

The trouble is that if you are unfortunate enough to find yourself being taken to an employment tribunal, the first document the tribunal will want to see is the contract of employment (or "written statement of main terms of employment") as it is called in the legislation). As an employer you are obliged to issue one of these to all staff. If you have not you have failed the first test, not a good start.

Even if you have got a contract, if it hasn't been written specifically for your company it may contain all sorts of unnecessary conditions. If you haven't complied with these in your dealings with employees then look out for a big award against you!

For a free guide to what needs to be included in a legally compliant Employment Contract, e-mail me at info@khes.co.uk.

Kashflow - online accounting

WatkinsonBlack have promoted an online accounting package called Kashflow for over 2 years now.

The question is, Would you rather be working on your business or doing repetitive tasks?

You can use our recommended software package for raising invoices, chasing payments and much more. So you have more time for the important stuff.

You can Access your Dropbox files, send customer data to MailChimp, plug in your merchant account, automatically download data from PayPal. This software package is integrated to the hilt with those and many other business applications and you get Free 24/7 Support. The software providers support team are always on hand any time of day, every day of the week. You work evenings and weekends, right? So do they.

KashFlow automates a whole range of repetitive tasks. So you have more time to focus on your business sale in the knowledge that the important accounts stuff is being taken care of.

If you either raise a customer invoice or receive a supplier invoice for the same amount every month, then you should let the software do that for you.

If you have to chase customers for payment, let the software do it.

Regarding your broadband bill every month? Let the software do it!

Repetitive tasks are boring, you will want to avoid boring stuff and then it won't get done. So use KashFlow and forget about it!

Eliminate the need to re-key data. Whether it be from PayPal, an e-commerce site, a CRM system or anywhere else - it's much more efficient and less prone to error to have the process automated. There are lots of applications integrated with this software to do exactly that. Check out the 'Add Ons' section.

There are lots of little options within KashFlow that will each only save you a few seconds. Always tick that same box every time? Set it to be ticked by default. Not only will you not have to spend the half a second clicking on it, you don't need to worry about ever forgetting it needs to be ticked. All these little things add up to quite a time saving.

A further benefit, if you sign up with ourselves and subscribe to Kashflow through us we can not only save you money on the purchase of the product but with your authorisation you can also access your account if you wish for us to assist with its application to your business.

New head for troubled school

A NEW head teacher has been appointed at a troubled Cheshire primary school which has twice been placed in special measures over the last four years and was said to still be making inadequate progress as recently as January.

Governors at Stockton Heath Primary School have appointed Dan Harding, formerly acting head at Plantation Primary School, Halewood in Liverpool. Rachel Brougham, chairman of governors at Stockton Heath said: "Mr Harding impressed the panel with his passion and vision and we believe he has the right qualities to take Stockton Heath Primary School into the next stage of its development and beyond.

"He is also a keen advocate of involving staff, governors, pupils and families in the improvement journey."

It was in June 2008 that Ofsted inspectors stunned the school team by placing it in special measures.

Education chiefs appealed against the ruling - but Ofsted reaffirmed its decision in September the same year.

Last summer, Ofsted ruled that the school remain in special measures and in January this year, a further inspection revealed it was still making "inadequate progress"

A temporary acting head was brought in from another school.

£10,000 boost for charity

A CHARITY providing care and support for children with life-threatening conditions has been given a £10,000 boost from Appleton-based Flextronics Global Services and Software (FGSS).

The firm, which employs around 250 people, held a "Dragon's Den" style competition for staff, inviting them to give a presentation about a charity close to their heart and how the company's support could help it further its work in the local community.

Rob Lawrie, who has worked at FGSS for two-and-a-half years, won the £10,000 prize for the Shannon Bradshaw Trust - a Warrington-based charity which helps children with life-threatening conditions and their families.

He said: "Through the competition, I was given the chance to raise awareness of a local charity and I'm over the moon to have won the donation for the Shannon Bradshaw Trust.

"The charity's founders, Alan and Patti Bradshaw, set up the charity after their daughter Shannon passed away in 2002 and they now devote much of their time to helping other families in similar situations with children who are seriously ill. I'm just so pleased that I could do something to help them continue their amazing work."

Patti Bradshaw said: "We're so grateful to Rob and to FGSS for this donation.

"We're only a small charity with about 15 volunteers so this will make a huge contribution to our fundraising efforts and allow us to continue providing support, care and equipment to families across the North West and beyond."

Walk will have Olympic theme

THE annual Stockton Heath Walking Day will take place on Saturday, July 7 - and this year will have an Olympic theme.

As usual, it will start with a service at Alexandra Park at 2pm and the procession will leave the park at about 2.20-2.30pm. Road closures will be in place around Stockton Heath from 1.30pm to 3.30pm.

Hillcliffe Baptist Church will lead the service, which will have an Olympic theme which will also be taken up by walkers during the procession.

The route of the walk, as in previous years, is as follows: Alexandra Park, Parkgate Road to A56 Grappenhall Road, right onto Grappenhall Road, right onto A49 London Road and then through the village.
